The Panamanian prosecutor's office on Wednesday requested a 12-year prison sentence, the maximum penalty for money laundering, for Jürgen Mossack and Ramón Fonseca, founders of the now-defunct law firm at the center of the international "Panama Papers" scandal.

Prosecutor Isis Soto asked the court for a "maximum" sentence against the heads of the Mossack Fonseca firm as perpetrators of the money laundering crime, during the eighth day of the trial that is being held over the "Panama Papers".
